William Hunter's Library

A Transcription of the Early Catalogues

Transcription of Museum Records 3:
Trustee Catalogue of Printed Books, 1785

VERSION 2: 21 December 2017

This revised version includes transcription corrections and newly identified matches of entries to the University of Glasgow online library catalogue. This supersedes the draft version which was released on 7 November 2017.

About the Project

William Hunter (1718-1783) is a major figure in the history of eighteenth-century medicine. The leading obstetrician, teacher of anatomy, and physician of his day, Hunter amassed one of the finest private libraries and museums of his age. The quality of his library earned him international fame. Containing about 10,000 printed books and 650 manuscripts, his library is exceptional for being both a working medical library and an example of book collecting in the wider context of the Enlightenment. Most similar contemporary book collections have been dispersed but Hunter's is a unique survival.

Hunter's bequest of his collections – book and otherwise – to the University of Glasgow realised his enlightened vision of retaining his museum and library together for public use. Glasgow's Hunterian Museum opened in 1807 as the first public museum in Scotland. It was an instant success.

Although the majority of books in the Hunterian Library today probably belonged to Hunter, many nineteenth-century additions were not made distinct from the core collection. The transcription of MR3 allows us to determine which books were in Hunter's possession at the time of his death.

Nine inter-relating manuscript catalogues of the library (MR1-9), dating from before Hunter's death in 1783 to the early nineteenth century are part of a series of Museum Records. These are crucial to our knowledge of Hunter's book collection during his life and how its contents relate to the library held in Glasgow today. MR3, compiled by Hunter's Trustees in 1785, is the most comprehensive of these catalogues.

This project is part of a wider project to bring together the collections of The Hunterian to reunite Hunter's original library and museum. The Digital Hunter Portal will be a virtual version of Hunter's enlightened vision.

Transcription notes

MR3 is arranged in rough alphabetical order by author and divided by book size (folio, quarto, octavo et infra, and pamphlets).

Modern shelfmarks have been added when found. All information added in the transcription appears in Arial while material in the original appears in Garamond.

Each page has been transcribed to match the manuscript: blank pages have been left blank. Therefore, the original foliation has been retained.

Ligatures (e.g. Æ, æ) have been silently expanded. All other spelling and capitalisation has been retained.

Entries that appear as Albino are later additions and not part of the original list. However, many of these have been matched in the modern online catalogue so they have been retained pending further research.

‘Not found’ means that no match has (yet) been found with a ‘Sp Coll Hunterian’ shelfmark. There may be other copies of the same books in the University of Glasgow Special Collection but they do not have a connection with William Hunter. Unmatched entries have been highlighted.

Corrections of publication dates given in MR3 have been noted in footnotes.

Abbreviations used by Hunter’s Trustees in MR3

Hunter also used these descriptions in his catalogues, MR1 and MR2
